President's Report

LYNDA TROUP
President

If you are like me, you are hopeful for a much brighter and better year in 2021. However, 2021, as life does, will pose its own challenges. In my first report to you as president, I spoke about the need for health and wellness and the efforts the Law Society was making to address this important issue for lawyers. Mental health in particular continues to be a struggle for many lawyers and important work needs to be done in this area. I will report on the work of our Health and Wellness Committee in my last report as president.

For now, let me remind us that it's important to take care of ourselves and to encourage our colleagues to do the same. It is very easy to get into a pattern of working late, drinking regularly, staying up too late watching Netflix and skipping (or not even planning) workouts. Combine the lifestyle with the stress of being a lawyer, as well as other life stressors, and depression, general unhappiness or being unwell often follow. While much of what happens in 2021 will remain out of our hands, it's a great year to make some personal changes. I encourage you all to leave work a little earlier, drink a little less often, sleep more and get that workout in – I promise to try as well. If you are struggling, even a little, please reach out to a friend, colleague or the Law Society.

Certainly a bright spot for me for 2021 will be working with our new CEO, Leah Kosokowsky. Leah started at the Law Society in 1999 as counsel in the Complaints Resolution Department. Most recently she was the Director of Regulation and has been integral to the operations of the Law Society since being placed into that role. Leah's can-do attitude is infectious and she will make a fantastic leader. Leah, thank you for your contributions to date and I wish you all the best as you start in your new role.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF NEW CEO

Leah Kosokowsky

The benchers of the Law Society of Manitoba are pleased to announce the appointment of Leah Kosokowsky as Chief Executive Officer of the Law Society effective January 18, 2021.

Leah was called to the bar in 1991. She practised civil and commercial litigation before joining the Law Society Discipline Department in 1999. From 2002 to 2015, Leah was the Director of the Complaints Resolution Department before becoming the Director of Regulation.

CEO Report

LEAH KOSOKOWSKY
Chief Executive Officer

A number of committees reported to the benchers on the progress of their initiatives.”

The benchers met virtually on December 21, 2020 for the last meeting of the calendar year. At the outset of the meeting, the benchers were pleased to welcome Bradley Regher, the President of the Canadian Bar Association. Brad not only is a Manitoba lawyer, he is also the first Indigenous President of the CBA, an accomplishment for which we are all enormously proud. Brad shared with the benchers his agenda for his presidential year which is focused on the cultural competency of Canadian lawyers and advancing equity and diversity in the legal profession.

For their regular business, the benchers approved of amendments to the Reimbursement Payment Guidelines and received a report from the Reimbursement Committee on the payment of reimbursement claims.

A number of committees reported to the benchers on the progress of their initiatives. The President's Special Committee on Health and Wellness provided an update on the Diversion Program that is being developed for lawyers who are in the complaints and discipline stream due to substance abuse or mental health disorders.

The President's Special Committee on Regulating Legal Entities reported on progress that had been made by other Canadian law societies with respect to broadening the scope of legal services that may be undertaken by service providers who are not licensed to practise law, within a structured or monitored environment. The benchers also agreed with the proposal that the Law Society undertake a formal consultation with the profession and other stakeholders with respect to a potential range of services that limited practitioners might provide to the public in the area of family law, either independently or under the supervision of a lawyer. This consultation is underway with the deadline having been January 31, 2021 to receive submissions.

Finally, before adjourning to join the members of the Manitoba Bar Association for the annual joint meeting, the benchers paid tribute to and bade a fond farewell to our outgoing CEO, Kris Dangerfield who has decided to join her husband, Tony, in their well-deserved retirement.

Where One Door Closes

LEAH KOSOKOWSKY, Chief Executive Officer

Kris Dangerfield has had an enormous effect on my legal career and with her recent retirement, she has influenced it yet again.

As an articling student and young lawyer at Thompson Dorfman Sweatman, I had the good fortune to work with and be mentored by many remarkable women, including Kris. When Kris was seconded to the Law Society to conduct their discipline hearings, they loved her so much, that they asked her to join the Law Society staff and it was only a year or so later, that Kris persuaded me to apply for an opening in the Discipline Department.

With that, I once again had the opportunity to work with and learn from Kris. Regulating in the public interest is challenging work, particularly in the area of lawyer discipline. However, Kris always approached this work, whether as hearing counsel, general counsel or chief executive officer, with kindness, compassion and humility.

Under her leadership, Law Society staff members have learned from her example and we all strive for excellence in regulation while treating the public and the profession with respect and dignity.

With Kris' retirement, I have yet another opportunity to carry on the legacy of excellence that she has built, following the enormous contributions of former CEOs, Allan Fineblit, Deborah McCawley and Graeme Garson before her. I will miss her tremendously, as will all of us at the Law Society, but will strive to fill her enormous (and always beautiful) shoes.

BITS and BYTES

Leah Kosokowsky, CEO

1

Congratulations to Karen Sawatzky and George Roy at the Manitoba Law Library who are the recipients of a prestigious Clawbie (Canadian Law Blog) Award for Great LEXpectations in the category of Best Library Resources. If you haven't done so, you will want to check out the Law Society of Manitoba's Great Library blog. As noted by The Clawbies, it is an invaluable current awareness tool for Manitoba legal professionals. To subscribe, visit lawlibrary.ca.

2

We have lost yet another valuable Complaints Investigation Committee member with the appointment of Elliot Leven to the Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench, General Division in the City of Brandon.

3

December saw not only the retirement of Kris Dangerfield, but also our amazing program counsel, Vivian Hilder. In addition, our enormously creative multi-media coordinator Leslie Supnet was recruited for an amazing opportunity which she could not turn down.

4

With some departures come new arrivals and the Continuing Professional Development Department is pleased to welcome Clayton McKnight (learning solutions designer) and Mike Morier (multi-media coordinator) who both started in early January 2021.

Although the Government of Manitoba is cautiously re-opening the Province, our staff are continuing to work remotely. They are available to respond to any inquiries by phone and email.

February is Black History Month And I am Thinking About it Differently This Year

ALISSA SCHACTER
Equity Officer and Policy Counsel

... slavery was legal in Canada for approximately 200
years and thousands of Black and
Indigenous people were enslaved until
the British Parliament
abolished slavery
throughout the colonies in 1883 ...

During the swell of Black Lives Matter protests this summer, I realized I did not truly understand what it means to be Black in Canada in the 21st Century. I had not appreciated how pervasive and deeply embedded anti-Black racism is in our culture, media, systems, and institutions. I now see this blind spot as a symptom of my White privilege.

I had read Ta-nehisi Coates' memoir in the form of a searing letter to his 15 year old son, Between the World and Me in which he talks about the visceral brutality of being Black in America, as well as many other accounts of the racial divide in the U.S. But things were better in Canada, or so I thought. While we have our unique history, Canada shares the sullied legacy of slavery, segregation and discrimination against Black people. In recent years, there has been increased discussion and awareness of the overt and systemic racism Indigenous people face in Canada, but it is only in recent months that we have begun to widely grapple with the racism faced by Black people.

Although not highly publicized, in 2016, the United Nations' Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights confirmed that anti-Black racism in Canada is systemic. It highlighted enormous racial inequities in income, housing, child welfare rates, access to quality education and healthcare and the application of drug laws.

Systemic racism manifests in the legal profession too. The Globe and Mail examined the issue in the article 'Why Are There Still So Few Black Lawyers on

Bay Street' published in July 2020. It chronicles the paucity of Black lawyers on Bay Street and reports on the experiences of the few who do make it, including “drawing scathing rebukes for minor errors that White colleagues don't seem to face; being mistaken for an assistant rather than a litigator; enduring comments about their hair and clothing, or blatant accusations of tokenism; being ignored in a circle of White colleagues, and left out of after-work drinks and client meetings.”

There is a void in high school curriculums when it comes to Black history. I was not taught that slavery was legal in Canada for approximately 200 years and that thousands of Black and Indigenous people were enslaved until the British Parliament abolished slavery throughout the colonies in 1883; nor did I learn that segregated and unequal schooling was practised in parts of Canada until the late 20th Century.

Over thirty years later, neither of my children were taught about this in school either.

In her book Policing Black Lives, Robyn Maynard summarizes research showing that at the time of the transatlantic slave trade, the social construct of blackness was created to justify enslaving blacks. Black people were not thought of as fully human but as commodities who possessed a limited ability to feel pain and were represented as animalistic, hypersexual and dangerous. Despite the abolition of slavery, the meanings that had been ascribed to Blackness persist to this day, as Black people continue to be unjustly associated with criminality and danger*.

Discrimination assumes many guises. As Canadians we like to believe we are a tolerant, multicultural society, in which those who work hard can succeed. That is the Canada that some of us are privileged enough to live in. We have work to do to make it the reality for all Canadians, particularly those who are Black, Indigenous and members of other marginalized groups.

Black History Month is a time to celebrate the significant contributions and accomplishments of Black Canadians in all aspects of life in this country. Personally I have also committed to continuing to educate myself about the many ways systemic racism appears and what steps I can take to help make change.

Annual Member Report Due April 1, 2021

Complete Online

This year's Annual Member Report is now available in the Member's Portal and is due April 1, 2021. It combines your annual report on your continuing professional development activities in 2020 and your Law Corporation renewal (for those that have them). For trust account supervisors, there are additional reporting requirements. This report must be filed by every lawyer who had practising status in Manitoba at any time in 2020.

Completing and submitting this report is mandatory. If you have provided us with your business email address, then you should have already received notification by email that your personalized online report is ready for completion. The email notification would also have contained your user ID and login instructions on how to access the Member's Portal for easy completion and filing of the report. If you have not received your email notification but believe you should have, then please contact Donna Mihalick at dmihalick@lawsociety.mb.ca or by phone at 204-926-2050. If you have not provided the Law Society with your business email address, please do so immediately.

The Canadian Bankers Association ("CBA") has provided the Law Society with an updated list of bank officials to contact in the case of delays in the discharge of mortgages.

GREAT LEXPECTATIONS

KAREN SAWATZKY, Director - Legal Resources

The numbers are going down. As I write this mid-January, I'm hopeful that they will continue that way so we can reopen the library (to members only) in February. Please check our website for current information. In the right hand navigation pane, we are keeping our operating hours updated.

I'd like to remind members that we can share our WestlawNext Canada subscription on a limited basis. We can give you a one week subscription to CriminalSource, Estates&TrustsSource, FamilySource and parts of Litigator for use in your own office. Email library@lawsociety.mb.ca to request a registration key.

LEGAL RESEARCH TIP

One of my favourite databases is HeinOnline.org. Whether searching for legal articles or legislation, it's one of my first choices. I also subscribe to their blog for valuable tips on using their service. We repost some of these tips on our own blog. HeinOnline has historical legislation going all the way back to Confederation, and 1871 when Manitoba joined. HeinOnline is available for all members by signing in to the Member's Portal and selecting "Library Resources" from the left hand navigation pane. Check our guide for instructions on how to find it as well as other legal research tools. Further to legislation research, you may also want to review our guide on searching Hansard (Manitoba edition).

Great Library Hours

Monday to Friday:
8:30 a.m. to 12:00 p.m. and 1:30 p.m. to 4:00 p.m.

For assistance, please continue to contact us
by phone 204-945-1958
or email at library@lawsociety.mb.ca
as much as possible.

THE CLAWBIES

Congratulations to Karen Sawatzky and George Roy who won a Clawbie for Best Library Resources Blog! This is a big deal. The Clawbies honour the top Canadian Legal blogs and the winners are a very elite group.

Here's how the Canadian Law Blogs award panel describe Great LEXpectations:

The Law Society of Manitoba's Great Library blog is a one-stop shop for court notices & practice directions, library news & resources, substantive law updates, legislation, legal research tips and local legal community blog posts. An invaluable current awareness tool for Manitoba legal professionals.

The Canadian Law Blog Awards, a.k.a. the Clawbies, are a project started in 2006 with the goal of highlighting great blogs published by the Canadian legal industry. The Clawbies celebrate free online Canadian legal content.

2021 Annual Joint Family Law Program

The Times They are STILL a Changin'

March 19, 2021 | 9:00 a.m. – 4:00 p.m. | Video Webinar

*Jointly presented by the Law Society of Manitoba
The Court of Queen's Bench Family Division Judges and The Manitoba Bar Association, Family Law Section*

When we last gathered for this program in 2019, the practice of family law in Manitoba had undergone significant legislative and procedural change and there was still more change to come. Hence the program title, and theme, "The Times They are a Changin' ". After a hiatus in 2020, the Joint Family Law Program is back and guess what ... the times they are STILL a changin'.

This year's program offers presentations that will assist you in navigating the ongoing changes and challenges of family law practice, not to mention the profound impact the COVID-19 pandemic has had on all of us. You will receive practical advice and inspiration from an esteemed group of speakers.
